“ The cypress wood doors on our home would smell and were hard to close when it rained. We replaced them with beautiful steel doors from Iron Works.

The Quality of the door is excellent and it really makes a statement.

I am now upgrading the front of the house to match the beauty of the door. I was most impressed with the employees of Iron Works. As the daughter of a builder, i can be very hard to please but everyone we dealt with was very professional. The installers were well mannered and worked without dragging around. They came in, did their job, cleaned up afterwards and left. I can't say enough about how impressed i was.

My husband and I are both very happy. We would definitely recommend Iron Works. ”

Eurositeline

The eurositeline designs by Iron Works offers beautifully crafted steel doors and windows with narrow sight lines, exceptional strength and unique sizing. The line is based upon European designs and gives spaces a contemporary look. The unique characteristics of divided panes of glass radiates an elegant, clean and classic appearance. Because these doors and windows are made of steel, we can design very narrow lines that will still support the glass and hardware in a way that wooden doors cannot. This type of architectural detail works well in both traditional and contemporary applications.

“ Thank you for visiting me and checking to see if I am still pleased with the security work you did on my house. My husband of 56 years passed away two and a half years ago. Living alone, for me, was a big adjustment. I wanted to be active in my church and community but an uneasiness crept in involving safety. Today, after two and a half years, I am counting my blessings. I can attend morning or evening events and know I am coming home to a secure house.

In addition to that, i have good vision to the outside through my windows and doors.

I can enjoy seeing the birds eat from the feeders and the flowers in bloom

MARTIN WILLOUGHBY: Entrepreneur Cary Crawley has courage to drive business forward

Published by: in Columns, 980.1087.002, MSBN © December 31, 2014

Leadership takes courage. Your decisions will not always be popular. Sometimes, you will need to persevere in the face of strong opposition. However, true leaders have a moral courage that allows them to press onward. Nelson Mandela once said, "I learned that courage was not the absence of fear, but the triumph over it. The brave man is not he who does not feel afraid, but he who conquers that fear." Legendary actor John Wayne stated it this way, "Courage is being scared to death—out saddling up anyway." Leaders understand that while fear can creep in, it can't keep you from pushing forward.

My interviewee this week, Cary Crawley, President of Mississippi Iron Works, is one of those entrepreneurial leaders who has the courage and persistence to drive his organization to success. Crawley, a Clinton native, started Mississippi Iron Works in 1985, and he still leads the outside sales team. With over 29 employees, he has grown the company to be a leading provider of iron doors, handrails and fences for commercial and residential. Crawley understands that for any company to succeed you have to have SALES. I personally have seen many companies with great products and people, but no ability to sell. Unfortunately, most of those businesses are no longer around.

Crawley learned the importance of selling early in his life. He shared, "My mother was in the direct sales business, and I began working with her during summers. She taught me the importance of effective selling." Crawley said that two of the most influential quotes that have inspired him are Churchill's famous statement, "Never, never give up. Success is not final and failure is not fatal. It's the courage to continue that counts." He also pointed to famed football coach Vince Lombardi who said, "The only place success comes before work is in the dictionary."

As a leader, Crawley believes it is important to set the example for his team. In his organization, this means that he is often on the front lines meeting with customers and calling on prospective customers. He noted, "I have always had the unique desire to get out and make sales calls — even cold calling. My philosophy is Whatever It Takes!" Crawley went on to note, "The formula for failure is sitting behind a desk waiting for the phone to ring. Why put off for another minute something that can help you and your company now?"

It is natural to let fear creep in when faced with the challenges of running a successful business. However, Crawley emphasized, "Don't ever let fear prevent you from being successful. The only way to cure fear is to take action. Inaction leaves you paralyzed." Dale Carnegie once said, "Inaction breeds doubt and fear. Action breeds confidence and courage. If you want to conquer fear, do not sit home and think about it. Go out and get busy." Crawley also emphasizes the importance of delegation. He noted, "Focus on the one thing you can do BEST — and do alone — and go do it! If somebody can do something 80% as well as you can — then let them do it. Delegating is not abdication — don't pass the buck without making sure it gets done. You still need to be there to manage. Periodically check to ensure it's getting done properly."

Sometimes, being an effective leader means summoning the courage to proceed in the face of fear. We have to "saddle up" and press on. For leaders and entrepreneurs, it is not the absence of fear to strive for, but the courage to lead in spite of it. I was inspired by Crawley's focus and persistence as a leader, and I know he will continue to be successful because of it.

Iron Doors vs. Wooden Doors

Wooden doors need to be stained and varnished annually

Annual maintenance cost on a wooden door is between $700 & $1100.

Dark streaks in the wood or a whitish haze to the finish indicates that moisture is getting into the door and the finish is failing.

- “An iron door is your best bet if security and durability are top priorities. Steel units are stronger than wood doors, and they won’t crack or warp.” (Excerpt from www.thisoldhouse.com.)
- Although wood doors may have an elegant appearance when new, their structural composition is inferior to iron doors, especially in southern climates.
- The most common wooden doors installed are solid mahogany. With a finish of 1-2 coats of stain, and 2-3 coats of polyurethane, the doors are not made to last. In order to preserve the original look, they require periodic refinishing that could cost beyond $800 each time. When added to the original cost of the door, it makes them more expensive than most iron doors.
- Overexposure to sun and moisture causes many problems in wooden doors. Over time, the finish on the door will start to fade and the door will start to erode, causing cracking. The door’s finish may also begin to peel, bubble, or even cause the door to warp.
- Large entry wooden doors, especially ones with an arch, will also sag over time due to the door hinges and unevenly distributed weight.

Beautiful Works

By Joy Bethea

"We usually have two types of door customers," Cary Crawley, owner of Mississippi Iron Works, says. "Either they want safety, or they want an attractive door that is easy to maintain. We have safety doors, but we also have these beautiful custom designed doors, a perfect fit for people who want the look and feel of wood doors without the constant upkeep."

But now there is a category for homeowners who—when considering safety and beauty—prefer "and" rather than "or." Customers Dr. Phillip and Linda Allen Ley were looking for an option that combined safety and beauty. And the staff at Mississippi Iron Works was more than qualified to help them design a perfect fit for their French style home.

AFTER - INTERIOR

"We had a big, solid wood door," Linda Allen Ley says, "but Phillip was concerned about safety." It wasn't installed as securely as they wanted. Furthermore, the solid wood made it difficult to see who was approaching, and Ley also wanted to bring more natural light into the dark foyer.

After discussing it for a while, the couple attended the Home Show at the MS Trade Mart, and while visiting booths, ended up talking with Crawley. "We had several friends also in the medical profession who had recommended Cary," Ley says. "Of all the vendors who we ended up getting quotes from, Cary seemed the most excited and enthusiastic."

Together, the Leys, Crawley and the staff at Mississippi Iron Works created a safe door with a simple, yet classy, design that accentuated the home's style while allowing natural light into the foyer. "And they were very professional," Ley says.

"Though it is simple, it creates this 'Wow factor,'" she says. Their friends often comment on the stunning effect the door adds to the entrance of the home. "It's much more welcoming."

Crawley and the staff at Mississippi Iron Works are excited to help the increasing number of customers who are looking to enhance and upgrade their home with a new door. "Many people are interested," Crawley says, "because they are tired of maintaining wood doors." It is a flawless marriage between safety, convenience and attractiveness.

All of the doors are custom-made—designed, measured and cut—to fit each individual home. They are becoming increasingly popular, Crawley says.

Just as the team at Mississippi Iron Works special attention to quality when manufacturing and installing the doors, they are also committed to creating designs that enhance the aesthetics of each home.

Though the possibilities are endless, Crawley and his staff have made the design process simple. Customers can start by browsing a collection of sample photos of doors built in the past, both contemporary and traditional. "We also have a door designer who works to create a perfect, unique design for every customer's home," Crawley said.

To provide even more decorating options, Mississippi Iron Works' showroom boasts a remarkable assortment of additional iron furniture for the home, urns, railings, mailboxes, tabletop accessories, lighting, fountains, and ceramic Kamado Joe grills. The showroom, at the company's location in South State Street, is open during normal business hour, weekdays from 8 A.M. to 4:30 P.M..

The Leys were so pleased with their front door experience that they are already working with Crawley on further house projects.

"It is safe and secure, but also, it's beautiful," she says about the finished door. "We have a piece of art for our front door."

Safety Works

By Joy Bethea

BEFORE

When Jan and Glenn Roebuck decided to replace their wooden front door, they were familiar with Mississippi Iron Works through articles, pictures, and local ads. But for them, it was a personal recommendation about the company's reputation that sealed the deal.

"Our front door faces west and the wooden door was peeling and flaking," Jan Roebuck says. "We thought of getting it refinished, but we would have to continue doing that every year or so." The Roebucks were also concerned about safety, and when a thunderstorm blew water under the door, they knew it was time to replace it with a beautiful, yet secure, iron door.

IRON WORKS

601-355-0188 | 877-281-8232

Roebuck's sister, a previous customer of Mississippi Iron Works, was incredibly pleased with her experience, especially the quality of the service they provided. She highly recommended the company.

Mississippi Iron Works owner, Cary Crawley, credits their focus on the clients they serve as a fundamental part of the company's mission. "Our dedication to our customers and to our craft has made us the largest custom manufacturer of steel security doors in the South."

"Above all," he says, "we put the needs of our customers first and recommend only the security hardware solution best suited for their needs and desires."

When they began planning the project, the Roebucks faced a potentially stressful dilemma.

"We live in a subdivision," Roebuck says. "And so we had to get approval from the homeowners association. But Mississippi Iron Works was extremely accommodating. They fit the door perfectly, due to the custom designing, and worked with us to match all the requirements. We like that the doors are secure and look good."

All of the doors are custom-made—designed, measured and cut—to fit each individual home. And, more and more families are turning to these doors to create a safe, beautiful entryway for their home.

"We believe that there is a perfect union between keeping a home both secure and beautiful, and we strive to make that vision a reality everyday," Crawley says.

Once the Roebucks project was complete, they discovered a small glitch with the wiring. "We thought it might be a day or two, as is often the case," Roebuck says. "But when we called them to report it, they sent someone immediately. And just yesterday, they called to make sure that everything was working well. We are so happy."

"At Mississippi Iron Works, our goal is to serve our customers in the best way possible," Crawley says.

Mississippi Iron Works offers 60 months interest-free financing, and can accommodate any budget. Customers can text photos of their existing doors, and receive a return text with a visual of what their home might look like with a custom iron entryway. The number to text is 601-540-5778, and this service is offered at no cost and no obligation.

Even for homeowners who are not in the market for a new door, Mississippi Iron Works offers an assortment of iron pieces for the home—including light fixtures and tabletop accessories—and for outside—fountains, railing, mailboxes and ceramic Kamado Joe grills.

Stop by the showroom, in the company's location on South State Street, to see these stunning home additions, as well as the new fall collection, including iron tables, entryway pieces, and Christmas decorations. The showroom is open during the weekdays between 8 A.M. to 4:30 P.M..

"We are very pleased with the service," Roebuck adds. "And the doors! We love them."
